

2013 | ANNUAL | GIVING | REPORT

Enhancing the quality of life for New Jersey communities.

Carlos Hernández, Ph.D.

Christopher Martin

With this annual report, we are pleased to present to you the incredible work of our partners in the not-for-profit community, more than 200 organizations serving the communities that are home to Provident Bank's network of branches.

In 2013 the Foundation celebrated ten years of community involvement and surpassed $18 million in giving since its inception. We believe that strong communities grow from strong foundations, and our program areas continue to effectively serve the ever-increasing needs to support the health and wellness of our families and the future of our children.

It was difficult to choose which stories to highlight as all not-for-profits are working tirelessly to respond to the challenges faced by many. It is our hope that their stories will inspire you to become involved and perhaps join in making a difference in just one person's life in the community you live or work in.

Looking forward is always exciting! This report introduces our new look. In February 2014 Provident Bank celebrated its bicentennial anniversary—that's 175 years of serving the people and businesses with skill and commitment. To commemorate this anniversary and herald in a new era for Provident Bank and The Provident Bank Foundation, we're introducing a fresh logo which embraces and respects Provident's heritage while representing Provident's future.

We're still the same Provident Bank Foundation—committed to helping the communities served by Provident Bank.

HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

Saint Peter's Foundation, New Brunswick • $100,000

The Children's Hospital at Saint Peter's University Hospital operates one of the largest and most advanced Neonatal Intensive Care Units (NICU) in the country as part of the hospital's state designation as a Regional Perinatal Center. Seriously ill and premature infants – some weighing less than one pound – often must remain in the unit for weeks or even months at a time.

The Provident Bank Foundation donated $100,000 to Saint Peter's Foundation in support of its brand-new NICU Videoconferencing System for Parents. Saint Peter's is now the first Regional Perinatal Center to offer live videoconferencing for every patient on the NICU floor with 24-hour, multi-user access across multiple technology platforms, unlimited connections via password and personalized updates.

The NICU videoconferencing system has allowed parents, families and friends, who live long distances from the hospital or need to return to work after exhausting their family leave benefits, to see their babies 24 hours a day via an internet connection or mobile device. The grant enables each of the unit's 54 intensive and special-care bassinets to be equipped with a dedicated camera. With password-protected access, parents, family and friends can see the child from any location using any device or operating system.

"As a faith-based healthcare provider, we must care for the most vulnerable among us," said Ronald C. Rak, J.D., president and Chief Executive Officer of Saint Peter's Healthcare System. "And who could be more vulnerable than the newborn child and the mother and father who cannot see that child? On behalf of Saint Peter's we want to thank our friends at The Provident Bank Foundation for their generous grant."

"This partnership with Saint Peters to provide families access to their infant in the NICU is a source of great pride for The Provident Bank Foundation Board and staff, as well as for the staff of Provident Bank," said Jane Kurek, executive director of The Provident Bank Foundation. ■

Eating Disorder Program Staff of Overlook Medical Center.

Overlook Foundation, Summit • $3,500

The Provident Bank Foundation donated $3,500 to the Eating Disorders Program at Overlook Medical Center. A complex group of medical and psychological illnesses, eating disorders represent the third most common chronic illness among teens and the most deadly of any psychiatric illness. People with eating disorders, primarily anorexia and bulimia nervosa, tend to suffer from other coexisting illnesses, such as major depression and anxiety disorders, making them among the most difficult mental disorders to treat effectively. Hospitalizations for eating disorders in children under the age of 12 have risen dramatically with no outpatient programs in the state to meet the needs of this younger group of patients. In answer to a growing demand for services for young children ages 8 to 12, Overlook Medical Center has developed an innovative, evidenced-based family treatment program to meet the special needs of this vulnerable age group. The Children's Program includes substantial family involvement from the very beginning, as evidence shows that involving the family is particularly helpful in this age group.

WomenRising, Jersey City • $3,000

For over 100 years, WomenRising has been helping women and their families. The clients WomenRising helps are in need - in need of jobs, safety from domestic violence, freedom from substance abuse and safe homes for children. With a $3,000 grant from The Provident Bank Foundation, WomenRising empowers people to build better lives by providing affordable housing, supportive counseling, crisis intervention, workforce development and job placement, shelter for victims of domestic violence, outreach, advocacy and referrals. WomenRising's broad range of programs and services address emergency needs, long-term recovery and everything in between. Over the past year, WomenRising assisted over 10,000 women, children, and families.

The Crawford House.

Crawford House, Montgomery • $2,500

The Provident Bank Foundation donated $2,500 to Crawford House to help women in recovery through education, training and counseling. Crawford House offers an intensive, individualized, comprehensive six-month treatment program that addresses the particular needs of women in early recovery from alcohol and/or drug addiction. The program is designed to facilitate physical, emotional and spiritual healing by fostering a safe and mutually supportive community of recovering women. Crawford House can accommodate up to 22 women at any one time and serves over 100 women annually.

Community Medical Center, Toms River – $5,000 in support of the Diabetes Education Transportation Program: Increasing Healthcare Access in Ocean County.

Jewish Family Service of Central New Jersey, Elizabeth – $2,000 in support of their Project Play Program. Project Play is an evidence-based program, which uses the therapeutic aspects of play to help at-risk children resolve psychosocial problems and achieve growth and development.

Elijah's Promise, New Brunswick – $1,000 in support of Promise Culinary School, a food service training program for low-income adults.

Resource Center for Women and Their Families, Hillsborough – $1,000 in support of the Emergency Safe House. Victims residing in the Safe House receive comprehensive support services, including case management, legal advocacy and counseling services for both adults and children. Services are designed to support and empower residents during their recovery process.

COMMUNITY ENRICHMENT

New Jersey Institute Of Technology (NJIT), Newark • $25,000

Alternative Break programs began as student-led initiatives on college campuses in the early 1990s as part of an overall surge of interest in institutionalizing community service. Since this initiative began, thousands of student volunteers have “given up” their spring break to give back to their local communities.

In October 2012, Hurricane Sandy devastated hundreds of New Jersey communities. In response, NJIT established its own Alternative Spring Break program to assist rebuilding efforts and to focus on resilient design.

With a $25,000 grant from The Provident Bank Foundation, over 600 architecture and engineering student volunteers donated more than 3,500 hours on 22 different projects to help rebuild New Jersey homes and businesses and to assess damages caused by Hurricane Sandy across the state, from Newark to Beach Haven. During the week of March 15, 2013, student volunteers improved miles of boardwalk and beachfronts, cleaned up parks and coastal areas and removed thousands of pounds of debris.

NJIT established the Center for Resilient Design as a clearing house to inform and implement a resilient post-Sandy recovery in New Jersey. The University conducted over two dozen studies and seminars focusing on resilient design in communities destroyed and affected by Hurricane Sandy. With the help of students and Alternative Spring Break projects, applied research and community outreach, the Center for Resilient Design has been able to provide residents, business owners, design professionals and government officials with actionable, 21st-Century ready-to-build designs for disaster recovery in areas hard hit by Hurricane Sandy.

“The grant for NJIT’s Alternative Spring Break 2013 was critical to help New Jersey communities recover and rebuild from Hurricane Sandy,” said Thomas Dallessio, director of The Center for Resilient Design. “The Provident Bank Foundation provided initial seed funding for our new Center for Resilient Design, enabling students and faculty to work directly with officials, businesses and residents to create designs that are both resilient and sustainable.”

“After Hurricane Sandy, The Provident Bank Foundation Board allocated funds to the rebuild and recovery effort. This partnership with NJIT is one of several projects we were proud to provide with funding and participate in with volunteers from the bank,” said Jane Kurek, executive director of The Provident Bank Foundation. ■

Water damage inside the firehouse.

Ocean Fire Company Number One, Point Pleasant Beach • $10,000

Ocean Fire Company Number One traces its history back to the early development of Point Pleasant Beach. In October of 1885, a group of citizens met at the Arnold House to discuss the formation of a much needed fire company. Because the area was growing so rapidly, it was no longer practical to count on neighborly assistance for fire protection. The company is known for fire fighting, rescue services and public fire prevention education. Today, Ocean Fire Company remains a completely volunteer organization. In addition to fire fighting, the company remains very active in the local community. Hurricane Sandy devastated the state in ways unimaginable, especially in the beach towns. For Ocean Fire Company Number One, a three-foot wall of water surged through the building, destroying flooring, walls, insulation, electric wiring, furnace, hot water heater, furniture and everything else in its path. With the help of The Provident Bank Foundation's $10,000 grant, the fire company was able to repair and rebuild their firehouse.

Bonnie Brae, Liberty Corner • $10,000

The Provident Bank Foundation donated $10,000 to Bonnie Brae in support of its Transitional Living Residence Group House in Bound Brook. This residence is home to 15 young men at a time, ages 16-19. Residents stay for approximately one year based on personal progress and circumstances, after which individuals will move out on their own to appropriate independent living options, such as an apartment, group home or college. The primary goals for the transitional living program are to provide the young men with exposure to and practice with the life and job skills they will need to live as independent adults. They learn how to independently manage their time while attending school and juggling jobs and activities. They also learn other essential life skills, including home maintenance, meal preparation, laundry, personal finance and the use of public transportation. Perhaps most importantly, they work on healthy behavior and relationship building, communicating, managing conflict, and developing friendships with housemates, in school, and in the community.

Volunteers constructing the All-Access Playground.

Alliance for Morris County Parks, Morris Township • $3,500

Every child deserves the opportunity to play and be active no matter any physical or mental challenges. The Provident Bank Foundation donated $3,500 to the Alliance for Morris County Parks to provide funding for an All Access Playground. The All Access Playground is an inclusive playground designed for children with disabilities to be able to play next to their able-bodied friends and family members. It is unique in its design and construction and will be a regional attraction for many years to come. The project provides for social, physical and emotional support for children who are often told about the many things they cannot do. According to the parents, the project will also give them a chance to socialize with other families, an opportunity they don't often experience. By playing together, the children will learn that although there are outward differences, all children like to play. Able-bodied children will learn tolerance and appreciation for people with disabilities. The children who are disabled get the opportunity to be "just kids" and not be left on the sidelines.

Clean Ocean Action, Highlands – $15,000 in support of its Waves of Action for the Shore program. In 2013, more than 13,800 volunteers addressed different community needs in the shore area, from clean-ups to water conservation.

Allaire Village, Farmingdale – $5,000 in support of the Interpreter's Program, which enables visitors to step back in time and experience the Howell Works Company, a 19th Century iron-producing community.

Long Branch Habitat For Humanity, Long Branch – $5,000 to help support the rebuilding of a home located in Keansburg that was destroyed by Hurricane Sandy.

New Jersey Community Development Corporation, Paterson – $2,500 in support of the Great Falls Promise Neighborhood Initiative. This initiative works to connect the dots between comprehensive neighborhood revitalization, positive youth development and education, affordable and supportive housing, the preservation of the Great Falls Historic District, creative economic development and direct public policy innovation.

EDUCATION

Fairleigh Dickinson University, Madison • $5,000

For many Military veterans who return from active duty, transitioning back into civilian life can be challenging, and they often meet limited opportunities in the workplace. The Rothman Institute of Entrepreneurship at Fairleigh Dickinson University's Silberman College of Business, however, is working to correct this with Veterans Launching Ventures (VLV), a free innovative entrepreneurship program exclusively for veterans.

Formed in 2010 in response to the trend of high unemployment and under-employment seen in veterans returning from Iraq and Afghanistan, the program has experienced steady growth in enrollment, programmatic reach, depth and visibility among veterans and has received positive feedback from professional organizations serving veterans throughout New Jersey.

A $5,000 grant from The Provident Bank Foundation provided support to VLV's expansion efforts to more fully serve the educational needs of our veterans, as well as provide opportunities that will help rebuild their lives.

The VLV program provides veterans with the skills and support to seize entrepreneurial opportunities, launch small businesses and nonprofits, and achieve personal success. This unique program combines in-person instruction with online education to teach students the fundamentals of starting a new venture and to impart the skills required to create and sustain a new business or nonprofit organization. Since its inception, VLV has successfully served more than 150 veterans, many of whom have gone on to launch innovative small businesses in the region and sought other successful pursuits.

"We've been really pleased with the impact of this innovative program. Not only does it increase the business skills of enrollees, but it also offers another support network for veterans," said James Barrood, executive director, Rothman Institute.

"With the support of the business community, FDU and several not-for-profit organizations, including The Provident Bank Foundation, VLV continues to provide veterans with the tools and mentors to be successful in their return to civilian life," said Jane Kurek, executive director, The Provident Bank Foundation. ■

New Jersey City University, Jersey City • $50,000

The mission of New Jersey City University (NJCU) is to provide a diverse population with an excellent university education. The university is committed to the improvement of the educational, intellectual, cultural, socio-economic and physical environment of the surrounding urban region and beyond.

The Provident Bank Foundation's $50,000 gift in 2013 was in support of The Provident Bank Foundation Endowed Scholarship Fund and was matched dollar-for-dollar by a U.S. Department of Education Title V grant. With this match, the initial value of this newly endowed fund is now $100,000. Funds will continue to grow in perpetuity and significantly increase the number of The Provident Bank Foundation Scholars at NJCU each year.

Currently, The Provident Bank Foundation Endowed Scholarship Fund at NJCU provides scholarships each year to four deserving students who are majoring, or intend to major in, NJCU's Business Administration Program. Scholarships are awarded based upon academic merit, community service and leadership qualities. NJCU has proudly awarded Provident Bank Foundation scholarships since 2007.

NJ LEEP, Newark • $5,000

NJ LEEP Inc. (The New Jersey Law Education Empowerment Project) was founded in 2006 in partnership with Seton Hall Law School to empower youth from underserved neighborhoods in northern New Jersey to pursue greater educational achievements through a three-fold focus on skills, habits and exposure. FAMILY SUPPORT & YOUTH SERVICES

Participants of Rising Tide's year-round, micro-enterprise development programs.

Rising Tide Capital, Jersey City • $10,000

Due to unemployment, under-employment and low wage work, many of New Jersey's urban communities house large numbers of poor and working-poor families. Living in the midst of these communities are skilled men and women with the courage, the talent and the entrepreneurial drive it takes to start and grow a successful businesses.

They turn to entrepreneurship as a way to supplement their income and to create economic opportunity for themselves. Rising Tide Capital, a Jersey City-based organization, assists these low-income entrepreneurs to build strong businesses that transform lives, strengthen families and build sustainable communities.

A $10,000 grant from The Provident Bank Foundation supported Rising Tide Capital's year-round, micro-enterprise development programs—The Community Business Academy and Business Acceleration Services. The Community Business Academy is a 12-week course that provides hands-on training in business management and planning, while Business Acceleration Services offer one-on-one coaching, targeted business seminars and special events.

Both are designed for people looking to start, grow or better manage a business.

“Since 2008, The Provident Bank Foundation has been a steadfast investor in our work and mission. In 2008, Rising Tide Capital was working with 182 entrepreneurs per year. By the end of 2013, we had expanded to work with 500 entrepreneurs per year,” said Alex Forrester, chief operating officer at Rising Tide Capital. “We are so deeply grateful for this support and the way it has enabled us to grow over the years. It is a privilege to partner with such a historic institution in New Jersey, one that shares our passion for this very important work in our local communities.”

“The Provident Bank Foundation is proud of its partnership with Rising Tide Capital. This organization provides significant development services to more than 450 entrepreneurs and continues its efforts to assist the individual in developing a new business or building on an existing one,” said Jane Kurek, executive director of The Provident Bank Foundation. ■
